The McVey Property and its history of ownership raises various questions about early 19th century settlement and division of larger tracts of land in the 8th Election District, especially ^{questions} ~~ones~~ of land speculation and the movement of Pennsylvania farmers to the Conowingo area. This property, which is part of "Bourn's Forrest" was owned by numerous Cecil County residents until the 1820's. The last exchange between county residents was a sale where Nathaniel Lightner conveyed 81 acres to Samuel Reynolds in 1820 for $3,645. (JS 17/239), which was a large sum for 81 acres and indicates a high probability that a structure was standing on the tract. This is further substantiated by the fact that Samuel Reynolds split the tract in the following year by selling a fifty-one acre parcel to Susannah Harris, of Nathan Harris, West Nottingham for $600. (JS 18/331) The remaining twenty-nine acres went to Issac Chambers of London Grove Township, Chester County for $1000. (JS 18/335) Since the owners before Issac Chambers, including Susannah Harris, were already Cecil County residents their need for small detached parcels of land for farming were much less than new immigrants from Pennsylvania. It is not completely evident as to who was responsible for the construction of the present two story two bay two room stuccoed fieldstone house, but with all facts considered the builder was probably Nathaniel Lightner who owned adjoining property along the Octoraro Creek. Architectural evidence supports this first quarter of the 19th century date with Federally influenced dining room mantel and early 19th century construction details. One of the most interesting features of this structure is its room arrangement, a two room deep house that is only one room wide, which is known as ^a ~~the~~ double cell plan.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

1820-1830
 The McVey - Derr House c. 1830-1850 is a stone structure located south of Route 1 and 1 mile east of Kilby Corner. The structure is located at the end of a long lane and on the south slope of a hill. The main facade used to face south with the primary gable running west. The present owners have changed the orientation around by adding a compatible structure to the east of the early house. The main entrance is now located in the new section on the north side. The owners doubled the earlier living space of the original house.

The early structure is a 2½ story fieldstone structure, two bays across by two rooms deep. The entire house has been stuccoed. The slate roof is of medium to steep pitch and an interior end brick chimney stack protrudes out of the west gable end.

The south facade is two bays across with an entrance in the eastern bay and a replaced sash window. There is a plan box cornice.

The west gable end has two sash windows on the first and second floors. The eve is closed with a plain barge board.

The north side has a single sash window on each floor.

The interior has been somewhat altered with the removal of some of the partition walls. Corner fireplaces remain in both rooms. The south room mantel is still in place. It has beaded pilasters that support a simple architrave. The frieze has one large central projecting block and two smaller blocks above the pilasters.

The mantel shelf is supported by a series of stepped molding and the shelf projects slightly on the ends and at the intersection with the main block. The moldings below the shelf repeat the slight projection. The corner ~~supported~~ ^{CUPBOARD} has two paneled doors below and glazed doors above. There is a slight cornice. A chairrail with a simple bead remains in this room.

A 19th century barn with board and batten siding is located to the north and east of the house.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This house is fairly significant since it retains its basic form and some of original details. The mantel is a nice example of a late Federal ~~mantel~~ ^{pedestal}. Even though an extensive addition was attached to the east side, the 19th century character has remained in that the new addition was added in such a way as to not damage the earlier appearance of the first building. ~~The house is also a partial three room plan without the large room to the east.~~ The house, like the others related to it, is located on the southern slope of a small hill. Associated along with the house is a 19th century barn which serves the agricultural pursuits of this farm. The property does appear on the 1877 map of Cecil County and the house was owned by A. B. McVey.
